UTTER STRANGERS

WRETCHED LIFE OF JOHN AND IDA SCHLEGEL,

LIVE UNDER THE SAME ROOF

BUT THEY DO NOT SPEAK TO EACH OTHER.

Slayer of Dr. L. A. Berger Pays $20 Every Month as the Rent of the Little Store in Which He Sleeps - What Mrs. Schlegel Says.

On a dingy awning in front of a modest, country-looking grocery store at 321 East Eighteenth street is the legend in faded black letters:

JOHN SCHLEGEL, GROCER.

There the slayer of Dr. Lyman A. Berretails meats and the necessaries of life to his customers by day. At night he sleeps in a bunk in an apartment partitioned off at the rear of the storeroom with sacks of flour. Over the store his di-vorced wife, Mrs. Ida Schlegel, lives with her two little boys, John and Hugo, aged 10 and 6 years. The father has been a stranger to his family ever since he was acquitted of the murder of Berger and released from jail, October 25, 1897. His wife will not speak to him. The most intimate relations he has with his family occur on the first day of each month, when Johnnie raps at the back door of the store and presents a bill to his father for the rent. This John Schlegel pays with never a word of protest and accepts a receipt signed: "Mrs. Ida Schlegel," for he is the tenant and she the landlady.

On the stock of goods rests a mortgage of $55 to remind him of the cost of a legal battle, fought stubbornly to save his life. The irony of it all, John Schlegel accepts with characteristic stolidity. Now and then he talks, but without bitterness and almost with apathy.

"I shot the man who robbed me of my wife," he remarks when in communicative mood, "and now she won't let the children speak to me. Very well. I don't care, so long as she gets along all right. She can keep the property. I can support myself. etimes I speak to the children. I say, Come in, but they won't well. They call me 'papa,' but she makes them afraid of me.

"Will I appeal the divorce case? No. 1 don't want to drag the matter up no more. The lawyers said they were going to appeal. I don't know what they did. They may appeal it if they like, but I'm willing to let the matter drop."

What Mrs. Schlegel Says.

Mrs. Ida Schlegel is a spirited woman. She smiles and shrugs her shoulders with She smiles and shrugs her shoulders with sareastic emphasis when reference is made to John Schlegel's spirit of humility.

"He's just biding his time." she says. "I know Schlegel, Didn't he wait eight months after he knew, before he killed the doctor? He was plotting all the time, though he swore to me with his hand raised to heaven, that if I would tell him the truth about Dr. Berger, he would let him live? But with deceit in his heart, he waited. And now he has threatened me with revenge if he has to pursue me to the ends of the earth. But I'm watching out. I won't let the children take anything to eat from him, although I tell them to always be respectful.

"Am I afraid to live here, with him betated."

"Am I afraid to live here, with him below? Well, yes, I am, sometimes, but I just say to myself, "There's no use of trying to run away from death; if it's coming, it'll get you, wherever you are, and I am just going to stay right here and support myself and the children and live down the siander that Schlegel has set going against me. But I keep the doors double locked and bolted and the windows barred and keep things piled up against them, so that there'll be a big racket by them falling down if any one should break in. I'm sending the boys to school, and I guess we'll get along.

"Yes I am going to keep the property. He deeded it to me several times, the last time after he found out about the doctor. I afraid to live here, with him be-

He was afraid to make a will himself, for fear it would make him die. But I wasn't afraid of any nonsense like that, so he deeded it to me, and I willed it back to him on my death. But after the divorce, I just took that will and tore it in two twice and laid it on the fire. I want the roperty to go to my children when I'm

And so in the same building live John and Ida Schlegel, enduring an artificial ex-stence, wearing out the dull monotony of istence, wearing out the dull monotony of their lives. It's a strange story, that of these mismated folk who have had their deep tragedy and are now living with constant reminders of the past around them. It was to avenge his wife's honor, he said, that John Schiegel committed his crime. But now in a store room rented from his divorced wife stands John Schiegel grimly behind a counter, attending to a desultory trade, while through a front window he can watch his boys, happy in their play, and know that in their minds he is worse than a stranger.

RABBI SCHULMAN RETURNS.

Confirms the Announcement That He Will Soon Leave for New York City. Rabbi Samuel Schulman returned from New York yesterday and confirmed the an-nouncement made in The Journal that he nouncement made in The Journal that he has accepted the pastorate of the Temple Beth-El, of New York city. He will today make a written statement to Leon Block, president of the Final Jehudah congregation, and will publicly announce his resignation Friday night. He will continue in charge here for five or ten weeks unless his successor shall be elected sooner. The congregation of Temple Beth-El has urged Dr. Schulman to come as soon as possible. Rabbi Schulman regrets that his sudden leave taking should cause hard feeling on the part of his congregation, and denies that he breaks faith with the Temple here in accepting his New York pastorate.

"Of course, my people here naturally feel a little sore," he said. "It is a compliment to me that they do, They hate to let me go, but they do not realize what this election means to me. I am elected to be co-rabbl, with equal privileges and the same rank as that held by Dr. K. Kohler, and with the same salary."

The tabernacle where Dr. Schulman will preach is located on the corner of Fifth avenue and Seventy-sixth street, and faces Central park. It is the second largest Jewish church in New York city and is said to be one of the most magnificent church buildings in the country. It has a membership of 569, embracing some of the very wealthy and distinguished Jews of New York. Among them is F. Sulzberger, of the packing house of Schwarzschild & Sulzberger, of New York and Kansas City. In reply to a question, Dr. Schulman admitted that The Journal was correct in the intimation three weeks ago that he was to leave Kansas City. "I could not however, admit the correctness of the statement then," said the rabbi, shrewdly, "before I had definite information from New York."

EXIT JULIAN

SUPREME COURT DECIDES IT IS UN-CONSTITUTIONAL.

Street Railway Officials Declare That They Will Now Go Ahead With Many Projects Which Have Been Held in Abeyance.

The Julian law, providing that all franchises shall be sold at public auction, the minimum bid to be 2 per cent of the gross receipts, was yesterday declared unconstitutional by the supreme court of Missouri on the ground that the act is too indefinite to be enforced. In the opinion of City Counselor Middlebrook the decision will not prevent Kansas City from demanding compensation for franchises granted in which the grantee has the use of public streets or grounds.

H. C. McDougal, while city counselor, decided that the Julian law did not apply to Kansas City, and the supreme court has sustained this view.

It had been hoped that the supreme court at nad been noped that the supreme court would decide that the legislature had no right to interfere with charter cities in local matters. The anomalous spectacle was presented of the city's legal department working to defeat a bill which increased the city's revenue, but which struck a blow at the privilege of home rule. The court, however, did not pass upon this question, deciding in effect that the legislature had a right to pass a law of legislature had a right to pass a law of this kind, but had merely made it too indefinite.

The street railway officials of the city declare that the decision opens the way to almost immediate action on several important enterprises for which franchises have already been asked or granted. These are: The extension of the Summit street line under the franchise of what is known as the West Side Electric Company, included in the Metropolitan Street Railway Company; the construction of the East Fifth street line under a franchise granted long ago to the Helm Bros.; the pushing of the plans for the Grand avenue and other extensions to the Brooklyn avenue railway, for which franchises have altered which to these there is the proposed Central electric railway, the preparations for which will no doubt be pushed more rapidly as a result of the increased assurance which the decision of the supreme court gives. The street rallway officials of the city which the decision of the property of the property of the foundary of the North terrace, returning on Park avenue. The revival of the Eighth street viaduct project and the extension of the Troost avenue and Holmes street lines, with an ultimate route to Swope park, are the more immediately probable results of the decision.

Mr. Middlebrook's Opinion. City Counselor Middlebrook, in discussing the decision yesterday said:

"A mistaken impression prevails that Kansas City cannot now compel corporations asking for franchises to pay for them. The city still has the power, the only difference is that franchises cannot be sold at auction to the highest hidder. The council still possesses the right to incorporate in all ordinances granting franchises a clause compelling the grantee to pay to the city a percentage of its gross receipts."
The only revenue received by Kansas City from the many valuable franchises given away is from the Kansas City, Missouri, Gas Company, which pays the city 2 per cent of its gross receipts, the amount averaging $15,000 per year.

Grounds of the Decision. the decision yesterday said:

Grounds of the Decision. JEFFERSON CITY, MO., Nov. 16 .- (Special.) State supreme court en banc in an opinion by Judge Williams, this morning, declared the Julian franchise law to be null and void because it is vague, indefinite and uncertain in its provisions.

The opinion says: "It will be observed that an attempt is made to regulate by one general provision the method of granting franchises of many different kinds. The provision is made equally applicable to each privilege or franchise mentioned. They are all placed upon the same footing and, under the act, must be disposed of in the same way. The legislature evidently intended to make no discrimination. It will be seen at a glance that it is utterly impossible to give this act any reasonable or sensible construction as applying to railroads."

Again it says: "The percentage is to be increased in each period of five years to correspond with the increase in the value of the land. There is a painful obscurity too as to what is meant by the increase cial.) State supreme court en banc in an correspond with the increase in the value of the land. There is a painful obscurity too as to what is meant by the increase in the value of the land thus occupied and used. If the requirement for an increased payment for the franchise after five years is meaningless in those cases, the proviso is practically eliminated.

"It would be thus seen that it cannot be stated with any degree of certainty what meaning should be ascribed to this part of the act. No bidder can know what he will have to pay under it. No municipal officer, when called upon to accept or reject a bid, can say what the city will receive by virtue of it."

ENGINEER'S FORCE REDUCED. Ten Men Were Discharged, but It Is Believed to Be Only Temporary.

In accordance with the order of the board of public works to reduce expenses in the engineer's and superintendent of streets' departments, Engineer Wise yesterday laid off H. S. Tipton, and G. Southwell. draughtsmen; H. M. Horner, W. F. Weston, draughtsmen; H. M. Horner, W. F. Weston, Jr., and J. H. T. Yost, inspectors; R.C. Martin, clerk; H. Gunther, Frank Mallon, B. Valle and George Selah, transitmen. It is the understanding that these men will be employed on alternate weeks until the next fiscal year begins, when it is hoped that more funds will be available.

Engineer Kiersted Reports That There Is No Danger From Holly Reservoir.

Engineer Kiersted, of the water works department, reported yesterday that the Holly street reservoir embankment is not affected, but that over 100,000 gallons of water are being wasted every day.
